A Look at the Latest Craziest Fashion Fads

Chapter 1:

Fashion Fad Basics

Synopsis

A trend is the greatest styles in clothes, shoes and other fashion accessories that are currently happening. An example of this trend is the design house that makes fashion lines with the basics of fad products such as signature short-sleeve shirts, burn-out V-necks and other clothes that manifest a certain feature that only lasts for a specific time.

The Basics

The current fad fashion basics today are colored jeans, maxi dresses, sheer fabric skirts and tops, short shorts and a lot more. Apparel and other fashion products are always classified by their lifecycle's length. Basics such as blue jeans and shirts can be short-lived depending on how they were designed.

Businesses that sell fad fashion basics can count on increased profitability as well as marketability for only a certain period, but can look for more profits as the development of new fads are never ending. Fashion products last shorter while basics last longer. Fashion can be a style for a time where people can adopt a certain style that they want. The lifecycle of a fashion product ends when it is no longer used by people.

While the fad has the shortest lifecycle, these fad fashion basics come and go. Clothes often have a fashion dimension even if it is just the color. As the features of fashion increase, the lifecycle decreases. Some companies create their lines that include basic fashion fad products to maximize their sales. For instance, a sweater line will produce five styles that include classic colors and styling with five additional styles which are modified every time to include collar changes, length and silhouette according to the preset fashion trends.

Fad styles that are based on breaking trends can be introduced in the market at least twice a year for increased sales. Styles that famous celebrities and sports hero are wearing are great examples of the fad fashion basics. Fashion styles are very popular and chances are they will come back. For once, skinny jeans are just fads, but now it is being used by many people even the men around the world.

The navy blue blazer is actually a classic style which makes resurgence long as it is embraced by many people. T-shirts are widely used by different people where many design houses are adding some twists in order to make it more appealing for more consumers.

No matter what kind of fad fashion basics you are wearing or using, it is always important to understand that it reflects our values and personalities when we try to look something in particular.

Chapter 2:

Gyaru Styles

Synopsis

Gyaru means gal which originated from a jean's brand "gurls" with a slogan that says, "I can't live without men". It was applied to peer- and fashion-conscious gals in teens and early twenties. Gyaru styles peaked in the year 2000.

The Gyaru subculture is a great influence on the Japanese fashion style with various gyaru brands that are more accessible in the rural parts of the country. In Tokyo, a shopping mall is dedicated to providing the trendiest and latest items from famous Gal brands. Some brands reach overseas through items that are accessible from web stores offered with worldwide shipping service. A gal circle meets up with the gals that hang out together.

All about Gyaruru

Gyaru style differs in subcategories, but the term pertains to glamour and fashion reminiscent of Bridgette Bardot with blonde skin and tanned skin. Gyaru also applies to people who are trying to imitate bihaku style created by Ayumi Hamasaki and the Namie Amuro's street style.

This style is a popular Japanese street fashion originated in 1970 that suits the traditional culture of Japan and classified as youth rebellion. This fashion style is characterized by dyed or bleached hair with shades of blonde and dark brown, dramatic makeup and decorated nails. The makeup consists of false eyelashes and dark eyeliner to make the eyes look bigger. The types of clothes for gyaru styles depend on the specific style you are choosing to portray.

Some of the famous gyaru icons, models and idols are Tsubasa Masukawa, Rie Matsuoka, Kumiko Funayama, Hikari Shiina, Rina Sakurai, Sayoko Ozaki, Satomi Yakuwa and Jenny Franz.

The following are some of the types of gyaru styles:

- Agejo – A glamorous and sexy style worn by, but not limited to the hostess. The idea of this style is to appear flawless and desirable which emphasizes enlarged and enhanced eyes with false eyelashes and contact lenses. The hairstyle is styled in curls, updos, wigs, or extensions. This style shows a very feminine and classy look.

- Amura – This follows the looks of Namie Amuro.
- Bibinba – This includes lots of jewelry and gold pieces similar to the B-gal.
- Banba – This style is lighter than manba with less white makeup and glitters. Banba style is extreme with colored contact lenses.

Despite the fact that it is looked down on by some people, the Gyaruru style is thriving among gals in teens and early those in their twenties. Most Japanese singers imitate this look such as the popular Ayumi Hamasaki and Namie Amuro who are the best examples of Gyaruru. The makeup can also be lightly incorporated on your own style with an exciting appearance.

If you are ready to darken your skin with a tan shade and wear heavy false eyelashes, then this style is for you. With the common hair dyes and makeup styles, you can look like a true gyaruru with the basic knowledge on how to wear this style. Hair extensions are widely used with heavy looking hair where teasing can be encouraged.

Black eyeliner is an essential part of this scheme. Nude lip gloss or lipstick is best preferred because you will be blending your lips with your face and not highlighting them. The eyeshadow can be taupe, white or dark brown with shimmer to widen your eyes more and create an entire glamorous look.

Chapter 3:

Lolita Style

Synopsis

Lolita style is a fashion subculture that originated in Japan which is based in Victorian clothing, although this style expanded in the Japanese culture. This look started with a modest style focused on quality garments and materials that are used in order to show an excellent Lolita style.

Blouses, knee-high stocking or socks as well as headdresses are best worn. Lolita style has been transformed into various sub styles which are worn worldwide.

Many people believe that Japan is the creator of the Lolita fashion, but it remains unclear. Perhaps, this trend began in 1970 when popular labels like Milk, Pretty, and Pink House started selling garments that are considered Lolita by the current standards.

In 1990, Lolita style became more recognized with bands such as the Princess Princess. These bands look Victorian with intricate costumes and their fans started to imitate their styles. This style spread and eventually reached Tokyo where it was popularized in the youth culture of Japan. Currently, this style has gained international recognition and is now found in shopping centers.

Additionally, this fashion trend is believed to react against great exposure of skin and body in the today's overcrowded society. Supporters fight for this issue with modesty showing themselves as elegant and cute instead of being sexy. It is also been popularized by more visual style artists. These visual style artists are actually fashion musicians in Japan that are usually males that feature makeup, hairstyles and colorful costumes.

5 Types of Lolita Styles

- Gothic Lolita – This style shows a combination of Lolita and Gothic fashion which originated in Harajuku in year 1990. It is characterized by dark clothing and makeup with red lip stick and smoky eyes due to black eyeliner. These are the typical styles that are more natural. With Gothic makeup, it is associated with white foundation which unfortunately has been considered as poor taste for Lolita adherents.

This style is matched with a little shade of red or bright pink and sometimes flesh-pink lip tint.

The outfits include fruit themes, pastels, flowers, bows, laces, animal themes or ribbons which emphasize cuteness for the unique style. Popular themes for the Lolita style are presented in the famous Alice in Wonderland. The jewelry used also reflects a fantasy theme with bonnets, headdresses and bows is Lolita.

- Classic Lolita – This is the more mature Lolita style which is focused on Victorian and Regency styles. The patterns and colors used are between sweet and Gothic styles. It's neither dark nor cute, but this look is more modern and mature due to its intricate patterns and muted colors on the garments.

- Punk Lolita – This style adds to the punk fashion with motifs that are suitable with punk clothing like the tattered ties, fabric, chains and safety pins as well as screen-printed plaids, fabrics and short hairstyles. The trendiest clothing worn is cutsews, skirts and blouses with jumper skirts and dresses. The used footwear includes Mary Janes, boots and oxfords with stylish platforms.
- Kodona – also known as “ouji” and “boystyle” is the more masculine type of Lolita that is influenced by the Victorian boys’ clothing. This is where “Prince Pants” came into popularity. This style is where the short Capri-style pants cut off the area of the knee. It is usually designed with cuffs that are lace-edged. This is commonly worn along with masculine blouses, knee socks and top hats.

Chapter 4:

Decora Style

Synopsis

The decora style originated in the late 90's and early 2000's and has risen to popularity not only in Japan but also across different countries. This style of clothing is usually in dark pink, baby pink and black while some neon colors are also used. Some people like to use pastel colors but such colors are found rarely as a part of this style.

People who are fond of this style wear plain shirts along with a hoodie that is often worn with tutu-like short skirts in colors that are almost the same shades of colors. Their hair is usually worn in low pigtails or ponytails matched with long bangs. The makeup for this style tends to be plainer than other types of dress styles.

All about Decora Style

What make decora style unique are the layers of accessories that a person wears. The significant part of this style is putting on several layers of appealing and cute types of accessories. Some may wear accessories until their shirt and bangs are barely seen. It has been a trend because of the wide mixture of colors that are worn by a person whenever they go out. Most of the time, a person in this style would have their accessories clicking with each other when walking or whenever they do slight movements.

Aside from layering different accessories, people who follow this style used to wear legwarmers, stockings, knee socks and armwarmers in several layers; each layer different from the other. They do this until they can get the style that they want or the mixture of colors that would complete their look.

Most of the common details in this style are leopard prints along with dental masks that are patterned. Eventually, the style was then replaced and merged in the late years of 2000 by OTT or over the top Lolita and fairy kei in Japan. Though it was already replaced, many still consider the style popular in different parts of the world.

Hairdo in Decora Style

As mentioned the hair will be tied in a ponytail or pigtails in the lower part of their head and are completed with long bangs. To meet the decora style, a person would wear a wide range of hair clips and bows until their bangs are almost covered by the hair accessories.

Others would wear hair extensions to give their hair a different color that would match their outfit of the day. In this fashion style, the more accessories you wear the better.

If finding hair clips and other hair accessories is difficult on your part, most people who like this style go to the little girls' accessories section in stores. There, you can find a wide range of hair clips in different colors that are sure to meet the style that you want.

Clothes

Most people who opt for this style have their closets packed with versatile clothes that they can mix and match. They wear layers of cardigans, hoodies, shirts and others. Others would wear bright colored or boldly patterned leg and armwarmers in several layers just to complete their look.

Blend the right colors and be able to achieve the look you want to achieve for the day.

Accessorizing

When it comes to decora, accessories are basically the most important things that one must have. Wearing layers of accessories is the key. When talking about accessories, you need tons of it. If you are going out, your look would not be complete without many bangles and several layers of necklaces hanging on your body.

Decora is not all about the outfit. It is also about how you maximize the use of various accessories. Others would include toys as accessories on their outfit, some bring along plush toys wherever they go and others expand their creativity with their nail art.

Some say that black would be odd to be included in this style, but it can be considered in the style provided that you layer it with matching colors for the look that you want to achieve. You can give it several touches of colors that you want and just use your creativity when it comes to blending the colors.

As long as distinctive layering is met in this style, going with this kind of Japanese street fashion is easy and possible.
