“How to Maintain the Pledge to Fix Your Finances from Your New Year’s Resolution”

Chapter 1:

Financial Resolutions Basics

Synopsis

You have been through a quite tough couple of years, not to mention decade, most especially when it comes to financial.

With this New Year, most people from the different parts of the globe, regardless of what status they may have, are now looking for the most effective ways in order to be financially stable.

Yes, you should definitely try to maintain your pledge about your financial New Year's resolutions.

There are actually quite a lot of factors for you to consider, but just so you know, achieving what you have set out to do is all about passion, dedication, and real efforts.

The Basics

With the New Year upon everyone, people are all at the very beginning of their most intended New Year's resolutions. People are all trying to join the gym, eat healthier, give up alcohol, so on and so forth. Perhaps, now is also the perfect time to begin thinking about your financial overhaul, right? Well, by finance, it means products such as personal loans, credit cards, or maybe an overdraft, or any forms of finances that potentially mean that you are in debt.

For your New Year's financial resolution to work, there are three essential qualities that you should take into careful consideration. These are the basics that you need to take into account.

First, it should be simple. If your resolution is too complicated, chance is it won't actually happen. Thus, if you really want to maintain that resolution all year out or maybe for the next years to come, you should make it simple to make it attainable.

Second, you should also be specific about your financial resolution. Remember, vague resolutions are literally useless. It is essential that you choose or set specific resolution. For instance, if you intend to lessen your debt, you need to set a quantifiable realistic amount as well as an effective time frame. If you push your limit or try too much, chance is it won't happen. It is better to list 1 thing right than to have a long list of 10 things that you can't do or won't do.

Third, automated financial resolution is the key. You are living in a hectic and busy world. So the most effective way to ensure that all things get well done is for you to make them your priority. And the best way for you to make them your long term priority would be to essentially automate it.

These three basic factors can be the key to maintaining your pledge to fix your finances. It is that time again when you use a New Year as your excuse to revamp the different facets of your live and make your own financial resolution. For many people, New Year's resolution basically involves common aspects like fitness and health, but there are also other people who try to have some changes in order to improve their own financial health and status. Well, you should be one of them too. You know how rewarding it is to be financially stable.

Chapter 2:

Hone in on One Specific Goal

Synopsis

Every person wants to set goals and dream big, but actually reaching those dreams and goals can be often difficult to achieve. One crucial issue may be that you are not being specific about what you really want to reach or achieve.

Without an accurate or specific financial goal, it will become impossible for you to manage your finances and your earnings through different phases of your life. It should definitely be done considering in min the different individual requirements.

It is also essential to create your specific plan, keeping into account what you really want to reach of achieve financially. Well, this can be your first step to creating wealth. Aside from that, you should also envision yourself twenty years after. This may include your lifestyle, your kid's education, savings, and your retirement age. These are considered as the most basic goals that are present in almost all people. Planning your retirement is a very critical stage indeed.

Wealth creation and retirement planning are the two most fundamental parts of an individual's life. There are actually lots of resources that you can benefit from, resources and tools that can cater to your unique needs when it comes to setting and achieving your specific financial goal.

Another important step is to establish your short term goal. What is it that you want to be or do two to five years from now. This may include buying a car, a home, long vacation trip, or paying off your loans, and many more.

In addition to that, being specific in setting your goal is to determine what you can do on a regular or monthly basis. This is considered accomplished if you're able to effectively save enough money from your earnings or your salary. But you should not be too overwhelmed by bigger pictures.

Having a specific goal instead of a general one will definitely prove to be very beneficial and rewarding. This applies to both short term and long term goals. By being specific, you are setting the right path to achieve that specific financial goal. Be smart in creating your goals to help you be prepared and confident enough to be able to achieve whatever it is that you want to achieve. Pay Off Your Debts and Live a Debt Free Life

Everyone wants to live a debt free life, but the question is how? In the current economy situation nowadays, it's extremely difficult to live a life full of debts and at the same time manage a family's expense. So, you need to take action immediately in order to pay off your debts. The most effective way for you to live a life free of debts is to create a good budget plan. Follow this plan accordingly and clear your balances. If you want to know how to devise a plan, here's how:

Know all your debts: This is the first important take to take towards creating the plan. You should definitely identify your current debt situation in order for you to be debts free soon enough. Carefully, go through your loans, credit card statement, and other debt statements that you may have. Calculate these amounts that you owe on different loans, cards, etc. and know the exact full amount you need to repay. Though you may be surprised with the total, however, the idea is for you to discover how much you owe exactly so that you'll be able to make some arrangements accordingly.

Prioritize: Once you've totaled the amount you need to pay off, you have to prioritize payments. Consider which debts you will need to pay off immediately, and which debts can be paid later. The best step to make if you actually have lots of debts is to select those with higher interest rates. With this, paying off smaller debts will be easier for you. Some people, however, think the exact opposite. They tend to prioritize smaller debts and leave the bigger ones behind.

Devise a plan: After establishing the priority list, it's time for you to devise an effective plan. A payment plan will be able to help you pay off those priority loans much easily. So, try putting all extra money for loan payments. If possible, you can even make double payment in order to lessen the amount of repayment. In terms of the smaller debts, you can always make minimum payment until you're able to pay them all.

Automatic repayment: For you to keep a debt free life, you can always consider automatic repayment system. One of the best ways to make a timely repayment of debts is to create automatic repayment of debts from your own bank account. This can actually save you lots of time, and can also assure you that all payments are paid on time.

Next, list all the regular bills. These may include your mortgage, home and auto insurance, water, electric, cable, phone, and other monthly bills. List when these bills are due as well as how much they cost. If it quite fluctuates, write average amounts.

After listing the regular bills, you must account for other kinds of expenses. This means expenses like gas, groceries, clothes, personal items, haircuts, among others. It's also essential that you budget your fun things such as movies, eating out, stamp collecting, or any other variables. If you do not budget your money for these things, then you'll become disillusioned eventually giving up on the budget.

Find Areas That You Can Actually Cut Back A Bit – Now that you've listed your income and expenses. Take the total expenses; subtract this from the total income. The difference will be an amount which you're under or over budget.

If you're over the budget, this means that you're spending way more than what you make. This is not ideal. For most, that overage may end up to credit cards. Then you're paying interest and this isn't actually necessary. You should always avoid using credit card in order to supplement the income.

Take the amount that's over; see where you can try to cut back from your budget. Sometimes, this could mean making a hard choice and you may need to give up something. But at the end, the reward could be worth it.
